novel experience. It was a snowball battle between the "sophs" and "freshies," and the former won after a spirited fight. The sophs were led by Capt. Wilcox and the freshies by Capt. Gain. The young ladies were dressed in their "gym" suits, and were prepared for a regular rough and tumble racket. The signal for the commencement of hostilities was given by the gymnasium instructor, Miss Adams, and the fun began. Capt. Wilcox's shot hit a daring freshman in the front rank directly on the right ear.

A cheer went up from the fort, and the old gold banner was waved aloft; but one shot does not win a battle. The freshmen had marched upon the campus with a determination to win the fort, and the flag if they could, in the half hour allotted to the battle. The most reckless sallied up to the very walls. Here they met a perfect volley of grapeshot, from which all but one tall, handsome brunette flinched.

She threw three balls inside the fort at three of the largest sophomores with unerring aim. One hit a set of dazzling white teeth, another would have pierced the heart had it been a bullet, but before the third had taken effect there was a sophomore cheer. A bold sortie had been made, and sophomores were mauling the daring besieger, but for a moment only. The freshmen rushed back like a drove of prairie ponies wildly charging. Then began a hand to hand encounter which muddled the amateurs with kodaks awfully. It was muscle, and nothing else.

'Why, those horrid things actually threw me down and walked on me,' said one of the sophomore lieutenants indignantly.

The cascades of hair came tumbling down like Humpty Dumpty, and one warrior's eye had a dismal hue. There was some "tackling" that would have done credit to football at Jarvis field. The Chicago and Pennsylvania recraits distinguished themselves by special acts of bravery. Again and again did the crimson freshmen enter the fort, until it looked as though they would rout the gold utterly, but the plucky sophs succeeded in driving back the invaders at every onslaught. When the bugle blew at the end the sophomores held the fort, with their golden banner still floating.-Cor. New York

Manners, Not Mannerism.

"Men's behavior," observes Bacon, "should be, like their dress, not too straight or point device, but free for exercise or motion." There can be no genial fellowship between affable, courteous people and your stiff backed formalists; while the intercourse of the latter with one another is necessarily dull and dreary to the last degree. They can no more enjoy society in their strait jackets of cold reserve than a wretch in the stocks could enjoy the hilarity of the crowd around him. Whoever desires to make friends should be cordial and conciliatory.

Nobody cares for automatic men and women who seem to go by clock work, and to want oiling at that. The error of utter unreserve should be avoided, too. It is less repulsive than its opposite, but it does infinitely more mischief. A man had better seal up his thoughts and feelings in his own breast than sputter them forth, in season and out of mason, to everybody he meets. Such meontinency of speech is sure to make the person guilty of it unpopular, and to create general embarrassment and alarm in the circle in which he moves. -New York Ledger.

Australia's Pastoral Areas.

Australia has in her vast pastoral areas sources of wealth as great and more permanent than those of her mines. Already she has nearly 100, 000,000 of sheep, which in the mild climate and under the sunny sky of the country require no shelter throughout the year and no food beyond what they get on the open plains. It is true that the sunny sky may change to a sky of brass, and that drought is the dread of the Australian shepherd, herdsman and farmer. Occasionally there is a succession of dry seasons, and then sheep have perished by millions and cattle by thousands on the more re-

To master recurring droughts is the great problem of Australia's inland future. Here, as elsewhere, nature challenges man's free advance and places some special obstacle in his way. Australians are facing their task with energy, confidence and with promise of much success. They have learned the art of drawing wealth even from scrub land, of which a single sheep requires several acres for its support. Irrigation works on a large scale have been begun in Victoria and south Australia.

Raising Sand by Suction.

An improved process for raising sand has been patented in England. A barge is used, having a tank to receive drainage or overflow of water there from. A pulsometer or other pump is furnished with a suction pipe-part rigid and part flexible-to reach to the bed or bank of sand, which is drawn through it and deposited in the tank. Around the mouth of the suction pipe are placed a number of hollow prongs, suitably connected with another pump. Through these prongs jets of water from the water hole of the barge are forced, and the sand thus loosened is readily taken up by the suction pipe. New York Telegram.

DR. SCHIFFERSTEIN WILL SOAR.

His Air Ship Differs from Others as an Eagle Differs from a Hen. Dr. L. J. Schifferstein, of Effingham, has invented a flying machine on which he is now experimenting. He says: "My theory of a flying machine is that of the inclined plane in combination with a propulsive force and a buoyancy chamber just enough to prevent injury to the machine in case of an accident when up in the air. To make the idea plainer, suppose you have the machine high up in the air; the inclined planes are then set so as to allow of a ed child against marriages with such descent at a great angle, just a little short of a direct fall, say at an angle of 22 degs, from the perpendicular.

"Now, when the machine has acquired a great momentum the inclined planes are so altered that the machine will Itake a more or less horizontal motion or direction, and after a while again changed so as to make the machine take an upward direction. It is also at this stage of the flight that the propelling force is applied and continued till the greatest altitude the machine is expected to reach is obtained, when again the force of gravity is depended on to ate girl who will, without question, carry the machine through about twothirds of its flight through the air to its destination.

"The dominant idea is: First, to use the inclined plane both as a supportive and as a propelling agent; second, use the force of gravity as a prime propelding agent, and third, to only use an artificial propelling agent to carry the machine upward. After that the force. of gravity, acting through the acquired momentum and applied according to the theory of the cycloid, will shoot the machine just like a projectile about two feet in a horizontal direction for every foot of fall.

This action can be compared to a ship at sea, it will be more or less in | es like yours.

a perpendicular direction. By this plan about half the propelling force will be saved, and again, when going against the wind, it will require less artificial ropelling force to raise the air ship."

-Cor. Chicago Tribune. The Book of Life. Every man makes the book of his life day by day as he lives, and at his death the pages are turned over by his friends, and by his record each one is judged. Each later line in the poem of life should add something to the opening lines. Each succeeding year should earry one's polities, character, creed and religion a little higher. One of the dangers to this country is the increasing tendency to devote life to pleasure seeking. Nothing should displace laughter. It adds to life. But there is not a more pitiable spectacle than that of an adult life wasted in pleasure. Some central utility should rise in every adult life. The census takers could not tell how many people in this country are devoting themselves almost wholly to ple as to look steadily into the face

The rapid accumulation of wealth may have lured a million, perhaps two millions, of people from their usefulness. Next in evil to the devotion to | tles with the devil. pleasure is the struggle for notoriety. Message Bearing Swallows. John Desbouvrie, who resides at Roubaix in France, has exhibited there fifteen swallows that he has trained after the manner of carrier pigeons. The swallows were set free, each one marked with a colored ribbon, and they dispersed in all directions. In fifteen minutes later the first one returned, and perched on one of Desbouvrie's fingers; one after another the others came back in quick succession. Desbouvrie is of the opinion that swallows are far superior to pigeons for the carrier service in time of war. Their flight is higher and swifter, and they are more reliable, smarter and more easily

They need not rest when flying long listances in order to partake of food, because they can do so on the wing. They are also trained with greater facility than pigeons. Desbouvrie has also succeeded in retaining a number of swallows during the winter in perfeet liberty, and their migratory mclinations did not carry them southward, so that even this obstacle would not interfere with the systematic training of swallows for the carrier service. -Teresite Globe.

The constant presence of a third person at the fireside and table is especially disastrous in the earlier years of wed lock. The presence of one who is not "of ourselves" may often restrain what is worst in us; but alas! it always restrains what is best. There must always be in the most perfect unions and the best ordered lives some little friction which will once in a while find expression. The gentle protest with which, if alone with your husband, you would disarm his fractiousness dies in your throat because of the third peron. The toving caress with which you would close his lips and make him ashamed of himself is as impossible to you as if you were paralyzed.

If misunderstood, pride will not let you explain, and you retort indignantly, or at best keep silent with an aching heart, and in time you grow to hate that third person, who may be an angel of light, but who is none the less eating holes in your marriage garment. It may not be possible without neglecting a sacred duty to have your house entirely to yourself, but I charge you, as you value your mutual love and happiness, be inflexible in your resolution to keep some waking hours out of every twenty-four when the fireside shall be sacred to you and your hus Pan-Presbyterian Alliance of B Ifast your thoughts, your hopes and fears, with no stranger intermeddling with your joy.-Mrs, P. ### Why Talmage Quit.

There are multitudes of young men smoking themselves to death. Nervous, cadaverous, narrow-chested, and have bad breath, singgish bowels, pain in the small fidgety, they are preparing for early departure or a half-and-half existence that will be of little satisfaction to is to take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, themselves or little use to others. Quit it, my young brother. Before you get through this life you will want stout nerves and a broad chest and a brain unclouded with tobacco smoke. To get rid of the habit will require a struggle as I know by bitter experience. Cigars and midnight study nearly put an end to my existence at 25 years of age. I got so I could do no kind of study without a cigar in my mouth-as complete a slave as some of you are. About to change pastorates from one city to another, a wholesale dealer offered as an inducement to my going to Philadelphia that he would give me all my cigars and the best cigars in the country, free of charge all the rest of my life. He was a splendid man and I knew he would keep his promise; then I reasoned thus: I now, when my salary is small and eigars are high, smoke up to my full endurance, what would become of my health if I got all my cigars for nothing? Well, I have never touched the infernal weed since. From that time I was revolutionized in health and mind, emancipated by the grace of God. I implore young men to strike out for the liberation of their entire naturefrom all kinds of evil habits. I see now in their elevated railroads they have introduced that pig pen, on wheels-the smoking car-and it is being made easier and easier all the time to sacrifice physical health. All those who break down their health through indulgence and go into graves sooner than they would otherwise have gone are suicides, and the day of Judgment will so reveal it. Many thanks to local Supts. for the interest taken in this department. I know the editor will be pleased to know that the Monitor is so generally read and appreciated. Continue to send us what you can for this column. The more we help a good work, the more interest we feel in it.
